The Army DACM Office is pleased to introduce the first civilian Acquisition Career Field (ACF) models. Similar to the career models for the military acquisition workforce, these civilian ACF models cover key areas for balanced career development and are intended as notional guides for professional growth and a well-rounded ACF experience. Look for an email to all Army Acquisition Workforce members announcing these models in the coming weeks. You may also have seen the DACM’s Workforce Minute video, in which Army DACM Lt. Gen. Michael E. Williamson highlights their value.

Not every opportunity presented in the ACF models is required, nor is each opportunity suited for everyone. The models include leader development, acquisition program opportunities, typical ACF assignments, some key competencies, DAWIA professional development and civilian education requirements.

In planning one’s acquisition career, civilian acquisition workforce members should work with their supervisors to develop and apply an individual yet overarching career concept based on evolving mission, vision and goals. These overarching career concepts include the following:

- Mentoring is an important element in professional development and should occur throughout your entire acquisition career.
- Developmental opportunities exist at every grade and at all command and organizational levels. Speak to your supervisor or mentor about these developmental opportunities, which are truly too numerous to mention.
- ACF-specific professional certifications are an additional level of professional recognition regarding a specific body of knowledge—Business Finance Certified Defense Financial Manager certification, for example, or the DOD Financial Managers certification program.

The career model for Acquisition Program Management is shown above. You may access all ACF models by visiting the Army DACM Office website and locating Civilian Career Planning Steps under Career Development.
Find your way with the DAWIA Certification Strategy Map

The Defense Acquisition Workforce Improvement Act (DAWIA) requires that acquisition personnel meet the acquisition certification requirements (education, training and experience) associated with the acquisition position they encumber within 24 months of assignment. It is important to understand the process of DAWIA certification and the steps involved, starting with the identification of your position as acquisition in your position description; how and where to find information on certification specific to your acquisition career field; the certification level required for your acquisition position; applying for a waiver if necessary; and the consequences of not achieving certification.

To lay out this statutory requirement in a useful format, Phillip L. Burton, who heads the Knowledge Management Office at TACOM Life Cycle Management Command, developed the Defense Acquisition Workforce Certification Strategy Map. This tool helps supervisors and acquisition workforce members walk through and understand each step of the certification process and the ramifications of not meeting the requirements. Be sure to check out the Defense Acquisition Workforce Certification Strategy Map on the Army DACM Office website.

Annual DOD Ethics Reminder

Per the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology and Logistics, the Hon. Frank Kendall, every acquisition workforce member must complete and document annual ethics training by the end of this calendar year. An Army DACM memorandum dated July 23, 2014 indicates that 100 percent compliance is required, and provides details on which ethics courses meet this requirement. Please be sure you complete this requirement as soon as possible. Although you have until Dec. 31, 2014, the USAASC Army DACM Office appreciates every effort to complete the training early.

There are two ways to complete this training:

1. Take the online version through the Office of the Judge Advocate General website.
2. Take the course in person when your command or garrison offers it. Contact your Training Coordinator or your Ethics Officer if you are unsure when your local training will be offered. At this point in time, in person courses may have already occurred. As this will be an annual requirement, please plan accordingly for 2015.

Once your annual ethics training is complete, you must be sure to properly list the course as complete on your Individual Development Plan (IDP) within our Career Acquisition Personnel and Position Management Information System (CAPPMIS) and obtain supervisor concurrence. NOTE: Acquisition workforce members who use TEDS must follow the Ethics Training Implementation Guidelines (page 4 on the signed DACM Memo) to determine how to list your training properly to ensure that it flows into the CAPPMIS IDP.

The Army DACM Office will be responsible for tracking and reporting compliance to Under Secretary Kendall’s office. Your command representatives (Acquisition Career Management Advocates and Organizational Acquisition Points of Contact) will be responsible for ensuring command and program executive office compliance. The Army DACM Office provides quarterly updates to the DACM and the Under Secretary’s office.

Program Management Handbook

Is your goal to hold a senior leader position in the Army acquisition workforce; a position that allows you to directly affect the Army Acquisition Corps mission? If your answer is “yes,” set your sights on an assignment as a Centrally Selected Product/Project Manager (PM) or Product Director (PD) and take a look at the new Program Management Career Handbook.

The Army DACM Office developed the handbook to provide aspiring PMs with a set of tools and critical career management information to assist in achieving the goal of becoming a PM/PD. The handbook begins with outlining important basic career development information intended to put you on the right path from day one of your acquisition career; and then guides you through the application and selection process. It also outlines various post-selec tion activities, such as required training and preparation for your new assignment, and follows up with post-utilization options.

Individuals selected for a PM/PD position are recognized as being members of an elite professional group that’s vital to our work to develop the critical systems and services that enable our Army to succeed in any mission. Competition for these positions is keen, and only the best-qualified candidates are selected.

PM/PD positions are among the most challenging in the acquisition workforce and require hard work and personal sacrifices on the part of those who occupy them. However, former PMs testify that the sacrifices are mitigated by the challenging work, the feeling of accomplishment, the ability to make a difference and the career-enhancing opportunities. A successful tour as a PM/PD brands you as a proven leader ready for additional senior acquisition leadership positions.
Making cents of travel funding for Defense Acquisition University (DAU) courses

The U.S. Army Acquisition Support Center (USAASC) Army DACM Office will centrally fund travel for DAU courses for Army acquisition workforce students attending a resident course located at a cost-effective location for anyone in training priority 1 to 3 (see table below for priority definitions). This new direction expands upon our FY15 funding guidance to allow central travel funding to ensure current position requirements are met while preparing professionals for the next level, and also provides cross-functional training opportunities.

In addition, this strategy will enable military and civilian workforce members to obtain required continuous learning points and increase their functional knowledge across acquisition career fields.

Please note that the USAASC Army DACM Office does not centrally fund local travel. Any local mileage incurred must be funded by your command or organization.

Helpful hints
• Please read the DAU Training Policy and Procedures to answer most of your questions about DAU training. If you still have unanswered questions, take a look at the Frequently Asked Questions regarding DAU training, located here under the DAU/AITAS Training section.
• Most courses have prerequisites, and courses must be taken in order. Please be sure that all prerequisites are complete before applying for the resident course. The USAASC Army DACM Office allows you to plan and register for a follow-on resident course if you have a firm reservation in the resident prerequisite, as long as the prerequisite will be completed prior to the start of the follow-on course. If you have any questions about course requirements or for a listing of available training, please review the DAU iCatalog.
• All Army students must apply for DAU training through the ATRRS Internet Training Application System. Be sure you select the location(s) denoted with the letter “C,” which identifies your most cost-effective location.

New: 2015 Acquisition Education and Training (AET) Catalog

The USAASC Army DACM Office proudly releases the 2015 Acquisition Education and Training (AET) Catalog. The updated version has a new look and feel, and contains the most current listing of centrally offered education and training opportunities available to civilian and military acquisition workforce personnel.

The catalog is broken out into sections that include educational and academic opportunities (Senior Service College, Degree/Tuition Assistance Programs, DAU Training), leadership and developmental opportunities (Training with Industry, Competitive Development Group, Defense Civilian Emerging Leader Program) and the Civilian Education System.

Take a look at the many opportunities available to our acquisition workforce members.
Better Buying Power 2.0
Improve the Professionalism of the Total Acquisition Workforce

DAWIA Standards and What They Mean for You

Certification: According to DACM requirements, no fewer than 96 percent of the Army acquisition workforce must be DAWIA certified (or be within the 24-month grace period). As of Oct. 31, 2014, 98.1 percent of the workforce is certified or within the grace period! This is a great accomplishment and supervisors and employees MUST continue to focus on the certification requirement to maintain this performance.

Continuous Learning Points (CLPs): Effective Oct. 1, 2014, a new-two-year CLP cycle began. Acquisition workforce personnel are required to attain 80 CLPs by the end of the cycle, which is Sept. 30, 2016. The DACM stresses attaining 40 within the first year. Review the Continuous Learning Policy for guidance on what counts toward fulfilling CLPs.

Hon. Frank Kendall, Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, believes that what really matters in the acquisition workforce is the professionalism and leadership of its people. Better Buying Power (BBP) 2.0 Focus Area 7 highlights the importance of increasing the professionalism of the defense acquisition workforce. In support of that initiative, the Army DACM Office is participating in a number of OSD-level working groups focused on the realization of these ideals. Recently introduced, BBP 3.0 continues its focus on the tenets of BBP 2.0 while adding new initiatives that encourage innovation and promote technical excellence. One of the new initiatives that the Army DACM Office is supporting is ensuring that program leadership is technically qualified to manage research and development activities.
